

Frequently asked questions

Q. How far in advance should I book Halo Blossom?

A. If you're getting married on a summer Saturday or Sunday, I'd suggest as soon as possible, or a year in advance as these dates get booked up very quickly. However we can often accommodate later bookings off-peak and mid-week. The ideal stage in your wedding planning is as soon as you have the colours organised, particularly the bridesmaids dresses. The flowers are the next natural element to organise and help set a style and tone for your wedding.

Q. How does the consultation stage work?

A. The best way to do this is over a cuppa. We like you to gather together as much info to help the discussions as possible. And this is your excuse to trawl the internet and read wedding magazines all in the name of wedding research. Lovely! Gather together any images of displays or bouquets that catch your eye to help give us a greater insight into your taste and style even if they're not exactly right. And if you have swatches of material for bridesmaids dresses and your bridal gown, that also helps. Sally runs all consultations, and comes armed with portfolio books, a guide as to what's in season, a checklist to work through and her creative thinking cap firmly in place. She'll then go away and put a detailed quote together for you.

Q. How much of my overall budget should I allocate for my wedding flowers?

A. Our experience and recent research suggests couples tend to spend around ten per cent of their overall budget on their wedding flowers. However for some this is greatly more, or a little less depending on how important they are to the overall look of your day.

Q. Do you have a shop I can visit?

A. Halo Blossom operates from a studio, so we do not have a shop for you to visit. But this means we can dedicate our time and tailor our flower buying to each bespoke event. However we do regularly exhibit at wedding fayres which are a great way to see our work so keep your eye on our blog or facebook page for opportunities to meet us.

Q. Is there a charge for delivery?

A. For most events, there will not be a separate delivery and set up charge, however if your event is further afield than our regular catchment area, then a delivery charge will be incurred. If this applies, you will be notified of this at the first quote stage.

Q. How does it all work on the day?

A. We will liaise with you prior to the date of your event to establish when and where your flowers need to be delivered. We will then put a timetable together for you so that you know exactly what is going where and when to make your day as stress-free as possible.

Q. Do you offer a hire-only service?

A. We certainly do. We have a vast collection of fantastic vases, containers, candelabra, pedestals, mirrors, tealight holders and vintage accessories which we regularly hire out without providing floral design services too. Please do contact us for more information.

If you have any further questions for the team, please do contact us. We'd be more than happy to help.
